

Strengthening the Resilience of the Finance Function: Lessons From Executives

Strengthening the Resilience of the Finance Function: Lessons From Executives

How finance executives are taking advantage of economic uncertainty to prepare for possible adversity, Tipalti, a leader in global payables automation, commissioned Vantage Research to survey U.S. finance executives in three software subsectors: e-commerce, educational technology and medical technology.

The main findings of the study include:

- 64% agree that financial functions needs to change in order to manage adversity.
- The most significant internal changes over the past three years were the investments in financial function automation.
- Executives focus on the capacity to forecast changes in the external financial environment in order to be able to adapt and respond timely.

Read the full case study now!

